

Carrington Coleman Attorneys Speak with Law360 Regarding Stolen Painting by Nazis During WWII

March 12, 2024

Overview: Partner Andrea Perez and Associate Josh Sherman recently published an article for Law360 regarding the ruling against the Cassirer Family seeking the return of their Pissarro painting stolen by the Nazis during WWII. Takeaways from our article include:

- The return of Nazi-stolen property continues to be a lengthy, expensive, and extremely complicated legal procedure.
- Nations are still finding ways to deny property to Jewish families despite international treaties and ethical and moral pressures.
- As time moves further from WWII, it is becoming increasingly difficult for Jewish families to receive their stolen property.

To read the full article, click here.

Related Services

1. Art Law