

Carrington Coleman Earns 2023 Chambers USA Recognition

June 01, 2023

Citing its strength in trial, appeals, and alternative dispute resolution, Carrington Coleman's commercial litigation practice has been recognized by Chambers USA for 2023.

Selection to the highly respected legal guide is based on thousands of in-depth attorney and client interviews to identify lawyers who demonstrate top technical legal ability, professional conduct, client service, commitment, and other key qualities.

The firm's ability to handle a wide variety of matters, including breach of contract, oil and gas, securities, employment, and construction disputes, was key to its selection. As one interviewee said of the firm: "The firm provide excellent work, they're very responsive and have the various disciplines well-coordinated to assist when needed."

In addition to the firm's ranking, Managing Partner Monica Latin and Head of Litigation Alex More earned honors for their litigation work, with Cathy Altman receiving individual recognition for her construction work.

Interviewees praised Ms. Latin's trial and appellate complex commercial work. "She does an exceptional job trying big business cases." "Monica is an excellent attorney. She has an incredible work ethic, she's very analytical and very good at taking apart a case."

Mr. More was honored as an Up and Comer by Chambers, calling him a "strong performer" in commercial litigation cases involving fiduciary duty, securities, and fraud-related disputes across multiple industries, including healthcare and real estate.

Noting her impressive track record in construction disputes, one interviewee said simply of Ms. Altman: "She is fantastic."

The Chambers USA guide is produced by London-based Chambers and Partners and is respected worldwide for its thorough guides to the legal profession.
