

Software, Technology, and Telecommunications

Carrington Coleman's Software, Telecommunications, and Technology clients benefit from a mid-sized firm that delivers large-firm performance. Because of our right-sized approach, clients typically work with the same team for every matter. Familiar faces and lawyers who know your company, your priorities, and above all, your technology provide unmatched continuity. And in almost every technical field, from computer science to electrical engineering to life sciences, most of our lawyers have advanced degrees, industry experience – or both.

We know our clients' business from a 360-degree perspective – we know their legal needs, we know their businesses, and we know their technologies. Accordingly, for many clients, we're a one-stop shop. Along with technical knowledge, many of our attorneys have big-firm training, which our clients benefit from as well. We deliver top-tier representation at mid-market rates.

A Full Range of Legal Support and Guidance

Our teams handle the full scope of legal and business issues for clients ranging from immense multinationals to nimble startups. These include disputes between owners, with suppliers, and all kinds of contract issues. We're also experienced at employment law and often serve as outside employment counsel, advising clients on matters from discrimination to breach of contract to claims of retaliation and harassment. And in the realm of business issues, we've done everything from negotiating cell tower licenses to managing regulatory issues.

Areas of Focus

- Representation of clients in a wide range of disputes – disputes between business owners, employment issues, contracts.
- A complete range of intellectual property representation, including patent prosecution, IP opinions and due diligence, and litigation.
- We act as outside employment counsel for clients in issues ranging from discrimination to breach of contract, retaliation, and harassment.
- Regulatory counsel with a wide range of government and regulatory bodies.
- We're a one-stop shop for startups, providing the full range of legal capabilities for fast-growing early-stage enterprises.